The Deep Crab Harmonic Pattern used to identify reversal points in technical analysis

What Is the Deep Crab Pattern?

The Deep Crab Pattern is a reversal pattern in technical analysis that uses Fibonacci ratios to identify price turning points. While it functions similarly to the standard crab pattern, its key distinction lies in the level of B point retracement relative to X.

In the Deep Crab Harmonic Pattern, the B point must retrace 88.6% of the XA leg, whereas in a standard crab pattern, this ratio ranges between 38.2% and 61.8%. This pattern typically forms at the end of trends.
